Van Wyck's Views on the Texas Pacific Bill.

THE LABOR MEASURE DISCUSSED

The House Considers the Postoffice Appropriation Bill and the Question of Subsidies—Congressional News and Gossip

Senate

WASHINGTON, Feb 13.—Dawes, from the committee on appropriations, reported the Indian appropriation bill with amendments placed on the calendar.

Ingalls said he had observed in certain quarters a statement that republicans of the senate were endeavoring so to direct legislation as to compel an extra session. He asked Allison, chairman of the appropriations committee, as to the condition of the appropriation bills.

Mr Allison said the military academy bill was the only bill that had been signed by the president. The district of Columbia bill, the pension bill and the consular and diplomatic bill were now in conference committee. The army bill passed the senate yesterday. The Indian bill had just been reported by the senate committee, and would, he hoped, be considered by the senate to-morrow. That left with the senate committee only the agricultural bill, which will be ready for consideration Monday. The other appropriation bills had not yet come to the senate from the house. The work of the senate committee was well in hand. If the house would take care of the bills there would be no difficulty in the senate.

Beck said he had had many years' experience in the appropriation committees of both houses, and he thought the work on the appropriation bills in the house was better up than usual for a short session.

Mr Ingalls was glad to have the assurance that the appropriation bills were likely to get through, and denied that republican senators desired an extra session. If there was an extra session the responsibility for it would depend on the party friends of the head of the next administration.

OTHER BUSINESS.

Hoar, from the committee on privileges and elections, reported a resolution allowing George E. Spencer, formerly senator from Alabama, $7132, being actual and necessary expenses in maintaining the title of his seat.

Saulsbury said, as a member of the committee, he did not concur in the resolution.

On objection of Cockrell, the resolution went over one day.

Hoar, from the conference committee on the electoral count bill, reported that the house and senate conferees were unable to agree. The disagreement, Hoar said, had taken place in the first week of the session.

The Texas Pacific land forfeiture bill, pending special order, was placed before the senate.

Blair asked unanimous consent to take up the anti-foreign contract labor bill, but Van Wyck declined to yield. Van Wyck said the senate and the country understood the nature of the bill. He did not wish to put it in further peril. It had been in peril already. It had been displaced by taking up another bill, whose principal feature made it impossible to get the concurrence of the other house. The principal features of this forfeiture bill were so plain that if Van Wyck might be allowed he would say they had been passed by the house of representatives almost unanimously.

The chair said it was not in order to make references to the proceedings of the house of representatives.

Van Wyck said he merely wanted to get the idea in some way before the senate. Some things, Van Wyck said, were very remarkable. The very moment a land grant forfeiture bill loomed up in this body terror reigned in some directions. The bill was demanded by unanimous consent of the American people. There was at least unanimity there, whether there had or had not been unanimity in the other place that he (Van Wyck) had not been permitted to refer to. We could not palter in a double sense with a matter of this kind. The people had demanded and the platforms of both political parties had demanded, that there should be action in the direction of this bill—prompt and speedy action. Every day's delay imperiled the bill. Soon the bill would be met by appropriation bills, and then ingenious gentlemen would, by long speeches, be able to prevent its consideration. Only one of the forfeiture bills had been able to get through congress, and that was a bill that the railroad company itself had been anxious to get passed. Had the senators forgotten the celebrated letters written by the "celebrated historian," Huntington of the Central Pacific, as to what was done about the Texas Pacific, when he was lobbying here? We should be admonished by that history to furnish no opportunity for any other historian like Huntington, or possibly Huntington himself, to duplicate or reproduce similar historical chapters. Van Wyck wished to say this much now, because he did not know whether, owing to "rules" and processes of obstruction, he would have a chance to say anything more on the subject.

THE LABOR BILL DISCUSSED

Blair moved that the senate proceed to the consideration of the labor bill.

Van Wyck asked the chair if this would not again displace the Texas Pacific forfeiture bill and relegate it to the calendar.

The chair said it would.

Van Wyck—Then I want that distinctly understood.

Van Wyck called for the yeas and nays on Blair's motion and it was agreed to, yeas 30, nays 19.

The labor bill was therefore taken up and its consideration proceeded with. The detailed vote was as follows:

Yeas—Aldrich, Allison, Blair, Bowen, Call, Conger, Cullom, Dawes, Dolph, Edmunds, Frye, Hale, Harrison, Hawley, Hoar, Ingalls, Jackson, Lapham, Manderson, Mitchell, Morgan, Morrill, Palmer, Pike, Platt, Pugh, Sawyer, Sewell, Sherman and Wilson—30.

Nays—Bayard, Beck, Butler, Cameron (Wis.), Cockrell, Coke, Farr, Garland, Hampton, Hill, Jonas, Jones (Fla.), Maxey, Miller (Cal.), Slater, Vance, Van Wyck, Vest and Williams—19.

The labor bill is the house bill and is entitled "An act to prohibit importation and immigration of foreigners and aliens, under contract or agreement to perform labor in the United States, its territories and the District of Columbia."

Considerable debate arose on the bill. Hawley thought it would prevent people from coming here, even as colonists.

Blair said the wages of the working classes should be protected from the effects of imported gangs of laborers. In the course of his remarks Blair alluded to recent disturbances in the Hocking valley, which were attributed to the class of people this bill would exclude. These disturbances had already resulted in a loss of $4,000,000.

INGALLS' VIEWS

Ingalls said he sympathized with Hawley in his regard for natural rights, but we are confronted with a portentous exigency. We should soon be called on to decide whether every man, woman and child on the face of the earth, no matter in what condition of physical or intellectual development or moral standing has a natural right to come to the United States and do and act as he pleased to the detriment of those already here. There were at this present moment, Ingalls said, 500,000 wage workers in this country who were idle, but were willing to labor with their dependent women and children. That would make 3,000,000 people who, amid the extraordinary rigors of an unusually inclement winter, were suffering for the necessaries of life. They need shelter, they need clothing that might be manufactured from the surplus productions of our factories now stored in warehouses awaiting purchase. They were in need of corn that was to-day being used for fuel on the plains of Nebraska, and wheat that was being fed to hogs in the valleys of Kansas. The question was had we the right to protect our own citizens against dangerous and detrimental competition, when forced on us by the ambition of those desiring to improve their condition or by the cupidity of those great employers who were indifferent as to the means employed to swell their already egregious gains. The nations of this earth, under this doctrine of "natural rights," had been dumping their paupers and criminals and dangerous and uneasy classes upon us, until, in Ingalls' opinion, in view of recent events in New York, Cincinnati and Chicago, the time had come to consider whether we might not be called on to modify, in some degree, our views as to the significance of the declaration of American Independence and the universal rights of man.

BAYARD AND SHERMAN

Bayard did not see the present direct application of Ingalls' remarks directed against the communistic forces which proposed to array numbers against property. It was not, however, by bills of this character that such forces were to be met, but by measures amending our criminal laws, so as to punish unrelentingly those to him in society, whose doings and threatenings have been pictured by Ingalls. That was the obvious right and the obvious duty of every state, as means of self preservation. But this bill was not leveled at difficulties involved in dynamite. Bayard then read the bill to show that its provisions were impractical.

Sherman defended the bill. It was directed, not against free men, but against men who were not their own masters, who did not come as free individuals, but were imported in a body, at a pre-arranged price, to compete with free and intelligent American workingmen. It was not race discrimination. Sherman had voted against the Chinese bill, and would have opposed this bill if it were discrimination on account of race.

After further debate the senate, without action, adjourned.

House.

WASHINGTON, Feb 13.—The house met at 10 o'clock, in continuation of Thursday's session.

On motion of Payson the senate amendments were concurred in to the house bill to prevent unlawful occupation of public lands.

Willis moved that when the house went into committee of the whole on the river and harbor bill all debate on the pending section be closed in an hour and a half.

Reed raised a point that this motion was not in order, as it was not consistent for the house to close debate on paragraphs of a bill not yet read in committee.

The speaker pro tem (Blackburn) said this point had been well taken, if directed against appropriation and revenue bills, but the river and harbor bill had been repeatedly held to be neither, and the chair therefore overruled the point of order.

Reed appealed from the decision of the chair. Such a ruling would establish a bad precedent of the most astonishing character, one which would necessarily recoil on both sides of the house. In the rule which allowed debate to be closed on a pending paragraph no distinction was made between general appropriation bills and other bills, and it was not possible for any member to give any grounds of difference between them.

Long called the attention of the house to the fact that if the principle involved in the decision of the speaker was carried out it would be in the power of any committee to put an entire bill in one section, and then cut off debate upon that section.

After further argument Willis moved to lay the appeal on the table, agreed to, yeas 121, nays 18.

Then, though it was two minutes past 12, the house adjourned, and was immediately called to order again, on Friday's session.

THE CALIFORNIA AND OREGON RESOLUTION.

Henley, from the committee on public lands, reported back the resolution requesting the president to inform the house what were the reasons which impelled him to appoint commissioners to examine a section of the California & Oregon railroad, said railroad having failed to complete its line within the time required by law.

Oates offered a substitute for the resolution, respectfully requesting the president not to confirm any favorable report which may be made by the commission recently appointed by him to inspect a section of the California & Oregon railroad, or order patents to be issued, until the senate acts upon the house bill forfeiting certain lands granted to aid the construction of that railroad, or until after adjournment of the present congress. He offered this substitute, he said, because he did not think the original resolution was exactly respectful to the president, and would not accomplish the purpose intended. The substitute was ruled out on a point of order.

Henley demanded the previous question, but no quorum voted, and Horr raised that point, saying such an outrage should not be perpetrated on the executive without debate.

The previous question was seconded 11 to 47, on a vote by tellers.

Steele moved to lay the resolution on the table; lost, 12 to 88. The resolution then passed.

The house then proceeded to consideration of business under special rules.

On motion of Thompson a bill passed amending the Pacific railroad act, so as to authorize the construction of a road from Sioux City, Iowa, to Granger, Wyoming.

On motion of Hall the senate bill passed with amendment, amending sections 2474 and 2475 of the revised statutes relative to the Yellowstone national park.

On motion of Willis it was ordered that at 10 o'clock to-night the house shall take a recess until 10 o'clock to-morrow.

THE POSTOFFICE BILL.

The house then went into committee of the whole, with Springer in the chair, on the postoffice appropriation bill, the pending question being on a point of order raised by Mr Holman against a paragraph allowing additional compensation to American steamships for carrying the ocean mails. The speaker overruled the point of order, and Holman appealed from the decision of the chair, but the committee, by a vote of 140 to 46, sustained the ruling.

Holman moved to strike out the subsidy paragraph, and to insert in its stead one appropriating $150,000 for transportation of foreign mails, including railway transit across the isthmus of Panama, and re-enacting for one year from July next sections 3976 and 4203 of the revised statutes. The provision, said Holman, contained in the bill proposed a direct subsidy to vessels, whether they carried mail or not. If the government entered into contract with the Pacific Mail Steamship Company, that powerful corporation, which had been pushing this measure with such industry, would receive $143,000, where it now received $21,000, and it would receive that whether it carried mails or not. It was a naked subsidy. No member who had been present on this floor some years ago, and witnessed the memorable scene which occurred in reference to the Pacific mail subsidy, would ever wish to witness another such scene. Men who had come in here with untarnished reputations had, under the baneful principle of subsidies, left here clothed with dishonor and disgrace, never to return.

DENOUNCED AND DEFENDED.

Mills inquired what right men had to put the hand of the government into the pockets of the laboring people in order to build up the business of John Roach, for in this bill John Roach was the "nigger in the woodpile." Why should the government go down on its knees to John Roach and give him $600,000 for carrying mails in American bottoms, when foreign bottoms were carrying them for $300,000. It was a bad start for the democratic administration, just once more brought into the confidence and affection of the American people, and a few days before the president-elect would take the oath of office and promise great reform to the country, that congress should go down on its knees to John Roach, as a prelude to that entertainment.

Money regretted that the gentleman from Indiana (Holman) had seen fit to unfold the sorry spectacle of the Pacific mail subsidy, and had attempted to stay a good measure here by an epithet. He denounced the measure. A subsidy. It was a subsidy to pay ocean steamships owned by American citizens a reasonable compensation, and it was a subsidy to pay steamers reasonable compensation running coast lines. He was not to be intimidated from the discharge of his duty by any tirade of disreputable jobs in the past, and he would not be frightened from the discharge of that duty by any cry of subsidy. The plain question was whether or not the government would pay American citizens reasonable compensation for carrying mails.

Warner (Ohio) supported Holman's motion and objected to the provision of the bill as being a departure from democratic doctrine, that a subsidy should never be voted.

HEWITT'S OPINION.

Hewitt (New York) said that if he were to decide the question in accordance with the views advanced he should probably take strong grounds against the provision in the bill, but the people of this country were not fools. They were practical people, who lived by daily labor, and who would sell the products of that labor. The question presented was simply this: "Did the people want to have mails carried in American ships or not?" If they did, then they must pay the reasonable compensation they demanded.

Bayne expressed surprise that the democratic party should start out in this way and inaugurate democratic assumption of control of this government by granting subsidies. No man could characterize the provision by any other name. It was paying for services done more than an equivalent for that service, and thus it was a gift on the part of the government. Who was to be benefited by it? Largely the Pacific Mail steamship company. Last year that company had earnings amounting to $1,280,000 and net profits of $815,000, and yet if the provision of this bill was agreed to the government would pay their company $312,000 for rendering service which it now rendered for $21,000. And yet the gentlemen said this was not a subsidy. He found among the directors of the company Jay Gould, Russell Sage, Sidney Dillon and C. P. Huntington, and that was the influence that laid back of this scheme to get a subsidy out of this government. The democratic party would be held responsible before the country for this act. The gentleman from Texas (Reagan) had fought to prevent railroad discrimination, and yet these very men having control of the Pacific mail were directors in the Pacific railroad companies, and paid those companies $95,000 a month to keep their rates up so that they would not enter into competition with the Pacific mail.

THE MOTION MODIFIED AND ADOPTED

Holman modified his motion so as to move merely to strike out the provision without insertion of the clause re-enacting sections 3976 and 4203 of the revised statutes. The motion was agreed to, 105 to 97, amid applause on the democratic side.

Horr gave notice that he would demand a yea and nay vote in the house.

On motion of Bingham an amendment was adopted providing that the rate on drop letters, including delivery at letter carrier offices, shall be two cents per ounce.

The committee rose and reported the bill to the house, and the previous question having been ordered on the bill, the house took a recess until 8 o'clock. The evening session is for consideration of pension bills.

The house at the evening session passed a number of private bills, and took a recess until 10 to-morrow.

CONGRESSIONAL NOTES.

THE INDIAN APPROPRIATION BILL

WASHINGTON, Feb 13.—The Indian appropriation bill as reported to the senate increases the house bill $152,000. The committee has struck out all provisions for the payment of private claims growing out of Indian depredations, but has substituted a general provision requiring the secretary of the interior to report at the next session all claims of this nature, together with such information regarding them as may have been gathered by agents of the department. The bill contains a new provision, as follows: "To supply food and other necessaries of life in cases of distress among Indians not having treaty funds, arising from emergencies not foreseen or otherwise provided for, to be used at the discretion of the president, $25,000." The provision for the Indian school at Santa Fe is stricken out. A new provision is inserted for the establishment of a school in Colorado for Utes. Ten thousand dollars is appropriated for the construction of an Indian school at Albuquerque. The feature of the house bill prohibiting, under heavy penalties, the sale of firearms to Indians, that amending the statutes relating to selling spirituous liquors to Indians, that authorizing the president to open negotiations with the Creeks, Seminoles and Cherokees, for the purpose of opening up and settling the Oklahoma country, and that which subjects Indians charged with the commission of crimes against person or property to the laws of the territory where the act is alleged to have been committed, are stricken out.

TESTIMONY AGAINST COMMISSIONER DUDLEY.

WASHINGTON, Feb 13.—At a meeting of the committee on payment of pensions, bounty and back pay to-day, Comstock, chief of the western division, testified that he was instructed during the recent campaign by Commissioner Dudley to extend to Grubbs of Indiana the same privileges as are accorded congressmen in presenting petitions. Grubbs was the republican candidate for congress from the Fifth district of that state, and was in opposition of Representative Matson, democratic candidate. Such an order, Comstock said, was considered strange both by himself and clerks in the office. It had been the practice to extend these privileges to ex-members of congress, but never before had they been extended to any person who had not served in congress, and who, like Grubbs, was a congressional candidate. A number of clerks were examined, who corroborated the testimony given yesterday, that orders were given to hold rejected cases until after election.

TO CHANGE THE LINE OF THE UNION PACIFIC

WASHINGTON, Feb 13.—On motion of Thompson a bill passed the house this afternoon of a good deal of interest. It amends the Union Pacific act so as to allow construction of a road from Sioux City westerly, via the Niobrara valley, to Granger, Wyoming, on the Union Pacific, west of the 100th meridian. The object of this is to cut off a bend made in the eastern portions of the Union Pacific, and will, it is said, shorten the distance from Chicago to San Francisco 250 miles. The bill has not yet passed the senate, but will probably. It does not grant any lands to the company to build the road, but does make the road when built a section of the Union Pacific, so far as relates to prorating exchange of freight cars, etc. It is understood the company stands ready to begin building the road at once.

THE SOUTH AMERICAN COMMISSION

WASHINGTON, Feb 13.—The president has transmitted to congress the report of the South American commission, forwarded from Havana, containing suggestions as to the removal of obstacles to commerce found in the unnecessary detention of vessels at quarantine. It concludes: "If our commercial relations with Central and South American states are to be extended to the fullest extent, it is obvious that a part, which naturally seeks an outlet down our greatest river, must be freed in some way from too stringent regulation, which, we are informed, in the past have worked such disastrous results."

THE YELLOWSTONE PARK BILL

WASHINGTON, Feb 13.—The bill relative to jurisdiction over Yellowstone park which passed the house to-day, is the one introduced in the senate by Senator Vest last session. An amendment, providing that jurisdiction over the park should be transferred from Montana to Wyoming, was offered by Delegate Post, after the bill passed the senate, and was incorporated in it, as it passed the house to-day.

THE PREEMPTION BILL

WASHINGTON, Feb 13.—In regard to the bill repealing the preemption laws which was passed by the senate yesterday, it is stated that the senate amendments to the original house bill are numerous and sweeping, so much so that there is no expectation that they will be concurred in.

WASHINGTON NEWS ITEMS

THE SWAIM COURT MARTIAL

WASHINGTON, Feb 13.—The trial of General Swaim has been temporarily suspended. When the court convened this morning it went into secret session, and the announcement was made that further proceedings in the case of trial yesterday were postponed until to-morrow. It is supposed the business with which the court is occupied in secret session is reconsideration of its findings in the original Swaim case, or Morrow case. An impression prevails that one or the other of these cases have been referred back to the court by the president.

WASHINGTON, Feb 13.—In the Swaim court martial yesterday, counsel for General Swaim objected to all colonels on the court, on the ground of inferiority of rank. The court overruled the objection, and accused pleaded "not guilty" to the charges and specifications upon which the trial was ordered, which are in effect that Swaim drew more forage for horses than he was entitled to. Several witnesses were examined, their testimony showing that forage on Swaim's requisition was sent to a stable where Burton and Swaim had horses. Adjourned.

Cyrus W. Field on the Warpath—A Sailor's Letters Washed up by the Sea—A Playwright Awarded Damages, Etc.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb 13.—The fire of last night at the almshouse entirely destroyed that portion of the institution set apart for the insane. Of 684 lunatics confined there are many missing, but it is thought most of them wandered away. At 9 o'clock this morning two more charred bodies were found in ward No 2. They had been roasted beyond all recognition. Several human forms can be seen in the burning wreck in the cellar. It is now thought twenty eight of the inmates perished; that a number of violent patients were locked in a cell on the third floor and could not be reached. Eight of them had been taken out and the others had not been accounted for. There seems no doubt they are lost and that these bodies are among the ruins. During the night many insane persons were found wandering in different parts of the city, some nearly naked. The poor creatures, generally seemed unable to understand the situation, and in some cases begged their captors piteously not to throw them into the river. Others seemed to take it as a grand joke and laughed gleefully when the subject of fire was mentioned. Another came down South street early this morning with a manacle attached to his wrist and a few links of the chain dangling from it. He shrieked and laughed as he struck right and left among the frightened people. It was found necessary to use violence and knock him down before he could be secured. Another madman caused a panic in a street car by rushing in, half clad and with his face scorched and blackened. He sank cowering in a corner. It was soon found that he was more frightened than those who ran away. A report that the streets were full of escaped maniacs caused much alarm in West Philadelphia, and strangers looked upon each other with much distrust.

Firemen are still working on the ruins. They are weary and half frozen, each man's helmet and coat appearing as hard as armor, but the search for bodies is continued steadily. There appears to have been a great deal of unnecessary trouble caused by rotten hose and a scarcity in the water supply.

ELEVEN BODIES FOUND

Eleven bodies were found to-day in the ruins of the burned insane asylum at the Blockley alms house. They were removed to the dead house, and placed side by side with the bodies of the seven suffocated and removed from the building last night. The burned bodies were horribly disfigured, some of them being burned to a crisp. After a day's thorough search, the alms house authorities are convinced that these eighteen burned and suffocated maniacs, all of whom occupied cells on the third floor of the building, are all that perished, and that all of the other 666 inmates were rescued and are now in quarters in other department buildings.

MEETING OF STOCKMEN

ST LOUIS, Feb 13.—The executive committee of the National Cattle and Horse Growers' Association has been in secret session here the better part of two days, and last night gave out the result of the conference. The committee had a long discussion regarding specific and general interests of the association, and the best methods of carrying out its objects, and among other things decided to urge the stock-growers of the country to organize auxiliary state associations, so that they may have effective representation in the national association, and be in better position to influence or procure favorable legislation, and with this in view they instructed their secretary, Amos T Atwater, to make a tour of the states represented by fifteen vice-presidents of the national association, to bring the matter directly before stockmen and aid in the organization of such auxiliary bodies. The committee also adopted a memorial addressed to the railroads of the country, in which they refer to the powerful influence wielded by railroads and point out how they can be instrumental in preventing the spread of contagious diseases and Spanish fever among cattle. With a view of effecting abrogation of the present conflicting state quarantine laws, and the adoption of a uniform system, they propose that the railroads shall have separate pens and gangways for southern cattle, which are liable to communicate splenetic fever, for cattle coming from districts where pleuro-pneumonia is known to exist, and also for imported cattle, during the term of quarantine all such cattle to be completely isolated from domestic and healthy animals. They also urge that cars used in transporting cattle be thoroughly fumigated and disinfected after each trip, or before they are transferred to another road. The railroads are also asked to provide for regular feeding and watering of stock in transit.

PROTECTIVE TARIFF ASSOCIATION.

NEW YORK, Feb 13.—The American protective tariff association met yesterday. Henry I. Eckert of Reading, Pennsylvania, presided. Among those present were Thomas H Dudley of New Jersey, George Draper of Milford, Massachusetts, M M Buglong, E. M. Amidown, William Haight, George Sharp, Legrande B Cannon, C. V. Klein and E M and Henry T Cooke. The committee on permanent organization suggested that the name of the body be changed to the National protective tariff league; agreed to. The committee appointed as executive committee to report on the names of officers, suggested that Dudley be made vice president, to act as president until the latter officer is selected. A R Whitney of New York was made temporary treasurer. A committee of three was appointed to draft an address to the public, setting forth the purposes of the league.

NEW YORK, Feb 13.—Committees representing the National Protective Tariff league and the American Protective Tariff association, decided to merge the organizations into one.

A YOUNG LADY BURIED ALIVE

SPRINGFIELD, W Va, Feb 13.—Mary Cox, while suffering from neuralgia of the stomach, was given morphine in excess of what was prescribed by the attending physician, and her death was announced a few hours afterwards. Two days later the body was buried. At the funeral one lady insisted that Miss Cox was not dead and begged that a physician be sent for. That night the dogs of a man living near the graveyard stationed themselves near the tomb and kept up a persistent howling. Next day the grave was opened, and to the horror of all it was found that the girl had been buried alive. The lining was torn from the sides of the coffin, and the pillow was in shreds. The poor girl had literally ripped the clothes from her body. Her arms and hands were torn and bleeding, her lips were bitten through and handsful of hair were torn from her head. The girl had come to life, and evidently made a fearful struggle to escape. The awful affair fills the community with horror.

CYRUS W. FIELD ON THE WARPATH

NEW YORK, Feb 13.—Cyrus W Field yesterday sent following cable dispatch: "Please request Mr Burt to sue at once the proprietor of the Truth for libel on me, and if James Gordon Bennett is in London, and he can, under British law, be sued for libel sent through the cable of which he is proprietor, and published in New York in the paper of which he is editor and proprietor, do so immediately, and advise me of the steps he has taken. Wabash did not declare a dividend on any of its stock, either common or preferred, while I was director or president. The first dividend on its preferred stock was on February 10, 1881, nearly a year after I had ceased all connection with the company. At the time this dividend was paid I was in India. I never sold a share of Wabash stock in London or anywhere, except in open market in New York. During the time I was president I declined to receive any salary."

WASHED UP BY THE SEA

PHILADELPHIA, Feb 13.—During the past few weeks a large amount of floating wreckage of all descriptions has washed ashore at the Delaware breakwater and near Cape Henlopen. Captain Gibbons of the tug North America, found on the beach a seaman's chest with letters addressed to George L. White, of the bark Thomas Fletcher, Brunswick, Georgia. There were also photographs of a lady and three children. The latest dates in the letters are February, 1884, and evidently they were written by the man's wife, who signs herself "Delia." There were also letters from his mother as far back as 1856. The life-saving crew report finding some wreckage along the beach. The vessel referred to is doubtless the bark Thomas Fletcher, which cleared at Brunswick, Georgia, October 25, for Buenos Ayres, South America, lumber laden, but which, according to latest reports, has not arrived at her destination.

DAMAGES AWARDED

CLEVELAND, Feb 13.—Mrs Mary M Tuttle of Ann Arbor, Michigan, started for Cleveland February 10, 1883. She arrived at Toledo and took the New York and Chicago limited express on the Lake Shore road, without having purchased a ticket. The rule was that passengers should have tickets for this train. She presented money, but the conductor refused it, and told her to buy a ticket at Sandusky. When she reached the latter place she bought a ticket from Sandusky to Cleveland, but the conductor informed her she should have bought a ticket from Toledo to Cleveland, and put her off the train in the Sandusky depot. She fainted, and the train steamed away. When she got here she entered suit for $10,000 damages. To-day the jury awarded her $2500.

RUNAWAY

About six o'clock last evening the delivery team and wagon of Keel & DuBois came flying into town from their fruit and vegetable ranch immediately west of Mount Tabor. They considerately took the newly improved J street for the home stretch and made excellent time to Water street, where they rushed into and broke down the railing on the west side of the elevated roadway and suddenly abbreviated their run by falling to the bottom, a distance of about fifteen feet. Strangely enough the horses sustained very little injury, consisting merely of a few bruises about the legs, while the only injury to the wagon was the breaking of the pole. A boy followed them in on horseback, and gathering up the outfit, put it up at a city stable for the night. They had evidently read of the daring exploit of C. C. Hall's team a few days ago, and were about to follow suit, when the accident defeated their purpose. It is the same team that a week or two since took a spin through East Portland on their own account, and sent the wagon seat flying through the side door of Prettyman & Carnack's store. It is a good and lively one.

A WAYWARD SON

A youth of 15 years or thereabouts has caused his mother much anxiety of late by absenting himself from home for several days at a time and associating with the worst juvenile element, both here and in Portland. Being unable to dissuade him from his course, she put the matter in the hands of the police, resulting in his arrest and arraignment before the recorder yesterday. That officer administered a severe and protracted reprimand, and after instruction as to the law applicable to his case and the penalty to which he would be subjected in the event of a second offense, he sent him on his way to profit by the advice.

NOTES

The twenty-first anniversary of the birth of the order of Knights of Pythias will be celebrated by Phalanx lodge of this city next Tuesday evening by an entertainment, social and supper, attendance being limited to members and their families.

Rev. S. P. Wilson, Mr and Mrs John Poole, W. T. Rigdon and H. Hinson, delegates to the State Temperance alliance from the M. E. church, returned home yesterday. Rev. Wilson was elected president of the alliance by a large majority, but was obliged to decline the position on account of his ministerial labors occupying his whole time.

A boy named Dickson was recently convicted in Justice Pittenger's court for writing obscene language about the Albina school house, and sent to jail in default of $5 fine. The juvenile depravity displayed in the manner stated has grown to that extent that a strict enforcement of the law has become necessary to check it.

Hussars have a Lively Brush with Rebel Troops.

A WILD RETREAT TO SUAKEM.

The Government Charged with Suppressing General Gordon's Diary—Elaborate Measures to be Taken by England

SUAKEM, Feb 13.—Small parties of Arabs have appeared to menace the garrison. A spy has returned from Heshein, the place where a reconnoitering party of hussars and Egyptians was attacked on the 3d inst. The Hussars got as far as Hudomb without opposition, but on their way out burned a native village without reason. They were attacked on the return at Heshein, which is about three miles from Fandoub. The attacking party lay in ambush, and the Arab fire was so terrible that the hussars could not face it and saved themselves from annihilation by retreating at full gallop to Suakem. Eight hussars and three Egyptians were lost.

Colonel Neenan, commanding in Suakem, in reporting the incident stated that the officer in command of the hussars had exceeded his authority in ordering the burning of a village. Spies were at once sent out to ascertain the fate of the missing troops. The spy who returned could learn nothing, but he found in the desert near the scene of the fight several articles of clothing which had evidently belonged to the missing men. The spy brought these articles to Suakem. All are pierced as if by spears. The spy reports he found the enemy encamped at Heshein.

GORDON'S DIARY SUPPRESSED

Conservative papers charge the government with suppressing General Gordon's diary and letters, in which Gordon stated that he sent Colonel Stewart away from Khartoum, in order to save his (Stewart's) life, intending himself to meet death at Khartoum, as he knew no help could reach there in time to rescue him. When parliament assembles the production of dispatches to the government in regard to the Soudan will be demanded.

Hartington, secretary of state for war, advises the acceptance of offers from Canada and New South Wales to send troops to the Soudan, but the war office authorities oppose the proposition. The question will be referred to the cabinet for decision. Owing to the opposition of the duke of Cambridge, commander-in-chief, and other officers, it is probable the ministers will decide to inform Canada and New South Wales that their assistance is not needed.

THE VOYAGEURS COMING HOME.

Canadian voyageurs with the Nile expedition left Alexandria to-day in the steamer Poonah, which will convey them direct to Queenstown. There they will embark in the steamer Hanoverian for home, and will reach Quebec the first week in March. A dispatch from General Wolseley compliments the voyageurs for their services.

ENGLAND.

ELABORATE MEASURES TO BE TAKEN.

LONDON, Feb 13.—The recent dynamite explosion in the house of commons demonstrated the fact that under existing rules governing admission of strangers to galleries and lobbies of the houses of parliament, it will be an easy matter for the dynamiters to convey explosives into the buildings during a session of parliament, and cause the death of many of its members. The government has decided to adopt more stringent rules regarding admission of visitors, and members of parliament in future will not be allowed to introduce strangers in the galleries and lobbies. The speaker of the house of commons alone will have the right of granting tickets of admission to visitors and he will only issue tickets to members for their friends, after having received a week's notice, so that in the meantime the antecedents of the proposed visitors can be inquired into. Turnstiles will be erected at the entrance to the galleries and lobbies, and experienced detectives be placed at each turnstile to carefully scrutinize strangers.

[illegible] SUNDAY OREGONIAN [illegible] the best [illegible] [illegible] and protected [illegible] also [illegible] sorted with the [illegible] in home [illegible]

WHAT IT IS ALL ABOUT.

Many inquiries have been received by THE OREGONIAN as to the origin of the war in Upper Egypt. The history is somewhat complicated, but the leading points are these England has for some time exercised a quasi protectorate over Egypt, and is in that country primarily as a collector of a debt. English investment in Egypt is due partly to the national policy of conquest, partly to the desire for controlling the roadway to India—the Suez canal. The latter inducement is also the cause of French participation. The profligate government of Egypt borrowed large sums of money from the English and French, and as no provision was made for meeting interest or principal, the two European powers deposed the khedive, set up Tewfik in his place, and established a ministry made up Englishmen, Frenchmen and natives. France eventually withdrew from the scene, and, with the Egyptian government practically in the hands of the English, all the affairs of that country were so managed as to put money in the British purse. The object of the bombardment of Alexandria was really the more complete reduction of Egyptian resources to English control. The rebellion of Arabi Pasha was the last [illegible] protest against the entire subjugation of his country. The English nominally assisted the khedive in suppressing it, but really crushed the only opposition to English authority.

Within the last few years Turkey has gradually abandoned its claim to the sovereignty of Egypt. The sultan for many years had demanded the allegiance of the khedive and exacted a tribute. At one time also, not long since, the Turkish government guaranteed the Egyptian loans. As lately as the bombardment of Alexandria, the sultan claimed a proprietary interest in Egypt, and at that time was undecided whether to help his English ally or defend his own nominal property. Substantially he did nothing. The Turks and Egyptians have a strong bond of sympathy in religious belief, but since that time Turkey has had little or nothing to say concerning Egypt. Probably it will have still less to say in the future.

While Arabi's revolt against British interference in Egypt was in progress information came from the Soudan, a southern dependency, that a false prophet of Islam had appeared there among the savage tribes infesting the desert, and that he was marching to Arabi's relief with an army of prodigious strength. The Soudan is a vast tract, lying to the south and southwest of Egypt proper, comprising Nubia, Sennaar, Kordofan and Darfur, having about 1,000,000 square miles and a population estimated at 12,000,000 people of Arabian, Egyptian or Negro descent. Egypt proper has long claimed sovereignty over this tract and exacted more or less tribute. The English, therefore, consider it a part of the assets of bankrupt Egypt. In this country centuries ago it became a tradition of the Moslems that one day a new prophet would arise and that under his leadership the followers of Mahomet would conquer the earth. He was to be known by certain peculiarities of person and birth and in all these respects El Mahdi answered the description ages before made of him. He had no difficulty in securing the adhesion of thousands of fanatics, and the stories that were sent out of his amazing victories were calculated to carry terror not only to the weak prince at Cairo, but to Constantinople and London. The sultan of Turkey, as the caliph of the Ottoman branch of the Mohammedan church, proclaimed the Mahdi a false prophet, but that fanatic preached a holy war and continued his progress northward, meeting and overcoming several detachments of Turkish and Egyptian troops that had been sent against him. Before he could penetrate northern Egypt, however, Arabi's revolt had been disposed of and the false prophet contented himself with recruiting his strength from the friendly tribes of the desert, occasionally taking a city held by the Egyptians and massacreing its garrison.

But the English, who never do anything by halves, deem themselves bound to subjugate him and their forces in Egypt are now charged with this arduous enterprise. Prior to the beginning of active military operations General Gordon was sent on to Khartoum to negotiate with the rebels, if possible. He believed he could pacify them, and with this view took a large sum of money with him. But on his arrival at Khartoum he found his mistake. The false prophet and his followers rejected the proffered negotiations. Gordon who had gone out almost alone, collected considerable bodies of native troops and fortified Khartoum. From this point he pursued his military operations against the rebels in different directions and with considerable success but his troops were seduced from their standard by Mohammedan [illegible]. They rose in mutiny against their commander [illegible] opened the gates of the city to the followers of Mahdi. Gordon was killed, and the British government was rudely awakened to the knowledge that it had upon its hands [illegible] war.

Detachments of British troops are pushing on up the Nile. There is some fighting in which [illegible] British valor. The actual seat of war is nearly two thousand miles from the mouth of the Nile and much of the distance is over the burning sands of the desert. The troops actually in the enemy's country do not exceed two thousand men, and they are surrounded by hosts of fanatical Moslems, against whom they are contending with the pluck and bravery that have always shed lustre on the British arms. It is not improbable that this force will be annihilated before a reinforcement can reach it. The excitement in England is intense, as the bulletins that come from Egypt report the almost continued fighting of the little force of British troops in the enemy's country, [illegible] odds.

The highly independent [illegible] the Springfield, Mass., [illegible] paragraph about the Oregonian [illegible] takes a fling at George H. Williams. The modern independent journal is meaner and more unjust by far than the ancient "copperhead" journal ever was. It regards every republican who bore a prominent part in the politics of the war and reconstruction periods [illegible] and every democrat [illegible] of the old copperhead [illegible] ble. For the [illegible] tion for the last nothing [illegible] as Brigadiers Hampton and [illegible] and Copperhead Hendricks [illegible] objects of "independent" adulation, while [illegible] and Blaine and Williams, and every [illegible] spicuous man who was not an ardent rebel or copperhead sympathizer [illegible] pendent sneer.

VALUED INSURANCE POLICIES.

It seems necessary to say a further word on valued insurance policies. A little attention is necessary to clear up a matter that otherwise would be obscure. Referring to the letter of Mr. Niles, printed this morning, it seems proper to say that in the articles published in this paper referred to by him, there perhaps was not sufficient discrimination between policies of insurance upon buildings and those upon stocks of merchandise [illegible]. The valued policy [illegible] appears to us to be [illegible] [illegible] for merchandise and movables [illegible] would not work well, and indeed it can hardly work at all. The legislature, if it acts on the subject, will make this distinction. Otherwise the business of insurance in this state will be rudely, perhaps fatally, [illegible]. But the bill before the legislature refers only to insurance of buildings. We print it herewith:

[illegible] The amount of insurance [illegible] policy of insurance on all buildings [illegible] the true value of the property [illegible] loss [illegible]

[illegible] Any insurance company liable to pay [illegible] may at their option [illegible] building wholly or partially destroyed [illegible]

[illegible] In case of partial destruction of the property [illegible] the amount shall be collected [illegible] the actual damage sustained.

General John W. Phelps, who died suddenly at his home in Guilford, Vt., on the 2d inst., was, when the civil war broke out, one of the very few graduates of West Point who was an ardent anti-slavery man. Except General Phelps, we do not remember any beside General Nathaniel Lyon, who was killed at Wilson's Creek, Mo., early in the war, General Rufus Saxton and General Abner Doubleday. While in command at Ship island, General Phelps issued his famous emancipation proclamation to the negroes, for which he was proclaimed an outlaw by the confederate government. His proclamation was also unfavorably received by the war department, and led to his resignation. Though a little premature in his action, he lived to see his policy adopted by the government. He was a martinet in military matters, but he was a gallant and able soldier, and a man of absolute honesty and pure patriotism. He has been for a long time a contributor to the Century and other magazines and newspapers and in 1880 was the anti-Masonic candidate for president.

Before Mr. William Reid asks any more favors of the city of Portland it might be well for him to pay the taxes he owes the city. His Oregon and Washington mortgage savings bank—a concern through which he has long been gathering in a harvest from city and country—owes the city a large sum in delinquent taxes which the city has so far been unable to collect. Yet this mortgage-taker and tax-dodger poses as the friend and champion of the public interests,—at the same time asking the city whose revenues he is withholding to grant him the use and virtual ownership of the most valuable piece of property it possesses. We agree with Julius Cæsar that all Gaul is divided into three parts. And in this day of the world at least two of the parts are owned by or mortgaged to "Dundee" Reid.

Mr. Henry B. Smith, the journal clerk of the house of representatives in Washington, has prepared a statement of the requirements of the several states of the Union regarding suffrage. So far from universal suffrage being the rule throughout the United States, we learn from this statement that none except taxpayers can vote in Delaware, Georgia, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, Tennessee and Virginia. In Rhode Island the property qualification applies only to citizens of foreign birth. Kentucky and Oregon retain in their constitutions the old discrimination on the ground of color, but the fifteenth amendment of the constitution of the United States has made that inoperative.

The United States can borrow money at 2½ per cent. No other power and no corporation in the world can borrow so cheaply. It is for this reason that the Springfield Republican would have the United States undertake the construction of the canal across the American isthmus. It will make a vast difference to the world's commerce, and especially to the commerce of the United States, if the tolls have to pay 17 per cent on the cost of construction, as at Suez, or only 2½ per cent.

The trades' unions of New York and other cities are called upon to take action against a certain brewer, "who despises the vital interests of the working classes, who have made him a millionaire," and to abstain from drinking his beer. It would be a more practical course for the workingmen to abstain on their own account.

NOT ENOUGH RAILROAD FOR ALL—An unusually powerful array of legal talent was present in the United States court room yesterday to argue the motion in the case of Lawrence Harrison et al vs the O & C R. R. Co., for the discharge of the receiver appointed by Judge Deady a short time since. Judge Kelly and Hon. E. Williams appeared for the defendant. Colonel Effinger represented the great Oregon and Transcontinental Company, W. B. Gilbert appeared for the Farmers Loan and Trust Company, and J W. Whalley for Lawrence Harrison et al, the holders of the first mortgage bonds of the O & C R R. There was a great deal of powerful argument and every speaker seemed to be clearly in the right till the next one was heard. Judging from the present aspect of its affairs, things are coming to a crisis with the O & C R R. The holders of the $9,000,000 of first mortgage bonds have never received interest on their investment. The holders of the $2,000,000 in second mortgage bonds seem likely to get "soup," as it seems certain that the road must be sold and be bid in by the holders of the first mortgage bonds, and where the $2,000,000 second mortgage bonds or the $446,000 claimed by the Oregon and Transcontinental company is to come from, is not perceptible even with the aid of a glass.

FIRE AT MT TABOR.—The fire noticed in these columns yesterday morning as having been observed out back of East Portland, proves to have been the burning of the dwelling of Mrs. Kidder, a widow, living immediately northeast of Mt Tabor. It was a good one-story building and valued at $1200, with an insurance of about $700. It appears the flue rested upon and was supported by a wooden frame which was used for the purpose of a closet, and the fire originated by the fiery soot in the flue burning through the top of the woodwork upon which it rested and igniting clothing and other inflammable material, and also causing the explosion of lamps which the closet contained. The fire soon gained headway beyond control, and all that neighbors could do was to assist in saving a portion of the furniture. The house was occupied by Mrs. Kidder, two children of hers and two others, belonging to Mr. A. A. Franklin of Portland, entrusted to her care. None of their clothing was saved, except what they wore at the time. They have been provided with temporary homes by the neighbors, and there is a disposition on the part of citizens to assist Mrs. Kidder in rebuilding. She was formerly a resident of East Portland.

"CONSTANT DROPPING WEARS A STONE."—In the office of the water company can be seen part of a broken plate through which three holes have been worn by the action of sand and water. The piece of crockery was among the dirt thrown in a trench to cover a water main. It happened to fall directly over the joint, where a service pipe was connected with the main, and in the connection there was a small leak. The water escaping under strong pressure, set some grains of sand rotating, and wore three holes through the piece of plate and also cut a hole in the brass union which finally became so large that the water burst up through the street, and this leak was discovered. The effect of the sand and water on the piece of ironstone china gives a good idea of how rocks are cut away, and gorges formed by streams of water.

HOW THE VANCOUVER'S BOILER WAS BURST.—It is claimed that the item published yesterday concerning the bursting of the steamer Vancouver's boiler while it was being tested was incorrect. The bursting was caused by the too sudden application of the pressure, it being but two seconds from the time the gauge registered zero to the time 125 pounds was recorded. The person handling the steam testing pump injudiciously turned on a full head of steam and the damage was done with two revolutions of the pump. Steamers' boilers are frequently damaged in testing but the slightest leak relieves the pressure. In this instance there is no telling what the gauge would have registered if the plate had not given way.

DECISIONS TO BE RENDERED.—In the state circuit court this morning, Judge Smith will render decisions in the following cases: Rice vs Rice, motion to strike out portions of the complaint; City of Portland vs Ah Yeck et al, motion to dismiss; North Pacific Lumbering Co vs city of East Portland, motion for judgment in pleadings; W. S. Ladd et al vs Edwin Russell et al, motions to strike out separate answers of Eugene F. [illegible] Lacour and Louis R. A. Lacour; Simeon Smith vs Alsey Fox, motion to make motion more definite on certain; Gordon vs Ingram, motion to strike out points of answer; Prettyman vs O R & N Co—Motion to strike out answer.

PART PAYMENT FOR WHEAT IN ADVANCE.—One of the first faint glimpses of hope for better times comes from Walla Walla in the shape of a report that wheat shippers are offering to advance 20 cents on the bushel for next season's crop. Last year they would not advance a cent. This advance will be a great assistance to many farmers. But it would be much better if farmers could get along without receiving any advance. There are two poor paymasters: one who pays beforehand and one who never pays. But what Oregon wants now is a big crop and what she wants next is a big price. Both these seem within the possibilities for the coming season.

ALL ABOUT A BUTCHER'S BILL.—The time of the circuit court was occupied yesterday in endeavoring to settle the question as to whether Mrs G. S. H. Jackson should be made to pay a bill of $14 for butcher's meat which had been consumed by her husband and her family. The matter had been run through a justice court and was appealed. The case appears to be tougher than the beef was, and to last longer. The jury would have made money by throwing in $1 17½ each and paying the bill. The time of the courts should not be occupied with such trifling matters, but probably the principle involved was more important than the money.

BEGINNING THEIR NEW YEAR.—China town was in a blaze of glory last night and wild with excitement in honor of the beginning of the year 4247 by the Chinese almanac. Hundreds of lanterns were suspended from awnings and from every story of the buildings along the street. The sound of mirth and revelry poured from every window and door, the street was redolent of loud smells and resonant with loud noise. The pop of the fire-cracker mingled with the melody of the Chinese clarionet and the skill of the musically inclined Chinese female. No shop or residence was without its display of flowers, fruits and [illegible] ornaments.

WILL TRY CORN AGAIN.—The experiment made by A. H. Johnson last season at Blalocks in raising corn to feed his cattle has proved so satisfactory that he is now negotiating with Dr. Blalock for another crop. It is thought that with the experience gained this year the plan can be made a grand success the coming season. Judging from the fat beef now in the market, it was pretty successful this season. That there is no trouble about raising all the corn wanted has been clearly demonstrated.

ACCIDENTALLY SHOT.—On Wednesday last, says the Vancouver Independent, George Rood, who lives on the Durgan place on Government island, attempted to pull a shotgun muzzle first out of a boat. The gun was discharged, the load striking him in the breast near the arm. He was brought in a small boat to this city and placed in the hospital, where with good and proper care he is likely to recover.

CENTRAL SCHOOL PUPILS.—During the month of January 695 pupils attended the Central school. The character of these scholars can be estimated from the fact that the percentage of attendance was 97.5 and that there was not one case of tardiness during the month. It is only right to add that this is the first month for a number of years in which no cases of tardiness have occurred.

TWO NEW DWELLINGS.—Bids were opened at the office of D. D. Neer, architect, yesterday, for the construction of two houses to be erected by Richard Knoll at the corner of Sixteenth and F streets. There were ten bids received. The contract will be awarded in a few days. The cost of the two buildings will be between five and six thousand dollars.

SUIT FOR FORECLOSURE.—Suit was commenced in the state circuit court yesterday by Jacob B Landis against Peter and Cecile Mathiot to foreclose a mortgage on an undivided half of lots 7 and 8, in block 257, in the city of Portland. The mortgage was given as security on a loan of $4258, made by Landis to Mathiot.

His last night's lecture on "Human Nature," Dr. [illegible]'s polished and scholarly eloquence fairly electrified the congregation.

HIGH SCHOOL GRADUATES.

Twelfth Annual Commencement Held Yesterday at Masonic Hall. The Essays and Speeches Mentioned in Brief

The twelfth annual commencement of the Portland High school was held at Masonic hall yesterday afternoon and evening, and was largely attended by the parents and friends of the graduating class. The hall, with the exception of a banner across the stage bearing the class motto, "Nostrum officium conficere paratı," "Ready to do our work," had no special decorations and presented its usual every day appearance. The programme of exercises, already published, was strictly carried out, and at its close in the evening the eleven pupils of the high school, constituting the February class of '85, had duly graduated, received their diplomas, and were ready to wrestle, as one of the essayists had it, "with the future which is all before us."

The audience at the afternoon exercises comfortably filled the hall and each speaker or reader was received with marked attention and well merited applause.

For actual literary merit and excellence of delivery, showing careful elocutionary practice, the exercises yesterday, as a whole, were indicative of much talent in the class, and were fully equal to those of the most brilliant graduating class in this city in former years. A string band discoursed music at intervals during the exercises.

The address of welcome from the class to its assembled friends was delivered by Clyde A. Duniway, one of the students in the language course. The address was brief, but appropriate and happily spoken.

Miss Bertha Moore read an excellent essay on "The Geology of Southern Oregon," which was as entertaining as it was instructive.

Miss Mary V. Peterson, in her essay "The Craigie House," gave her hearers a delightful insight into some of the incidents in the peaceful home life of the loved American poet, Longfellow.

Miss Leona Cuthbert had prepared an essay which she entitled "Reminiscences." It was something more, for while she recalled to the minds of her classmates, and indeed to those of every person in the hall, the troubles and trials, pleasures and profits of school life, she showed in a logical way the benefits to be derived therefrom when the school-room is left behind and the student mingles with the world at large.

Miss Eda D. Durkee, in her essay on "Work," delved deep into the social problem of the relation of labor to capital, taking a stand for the dignity of labor as contrasted with luxurious, idle uselessness.

Chas. A. Strauss chose for his subject "Humor," claiming for it a higher standard than the mere creating of laughter and quoting from the greatest humorists from the time of Ben Johnson, who said "Boo to a goose," to Oliver Wendell Holmes, who "does not dare to write as funny as he can."

Miss Julia V. Cowperthwaite's essay upon "Home" was a modest but beautiful pen picture, or rather series of pictures, of the happiness comprised in the well-organized family and its influence not only upon society but also on the policy of states.

Miss Anna L. Tilton wrote about "What we owe to Agassiz." She described the early life of the great naturalist, the inspiring scenery which everywhere met his eyes in boyhood, his wide researches in the realms of science and the results which he left behind him for the benefit of all mankind.

Henry S. McGowan contrasted in his essay "Nature and Art," taking the ground that true art was the outgrowth of nature and fostered by it. The writer proposes to put some of his ideas in regard to literary art into practice shortly as a reporter of a morning contemporary.

Daniel J. Malarkey was the orator of the day. His subject was "Irish Orators," his handling of it resulted in a carefully prepared oration, and it was delivered with a good voice in an earnest manner that showed an interest taken in doing well, for a better reason than to gain passing praise. The speaker's success upon the rostrum was all the more remarkable when it is remembered that he is but fourteen years of age.

In the evening the hall was packed, and standing room was scarcely to be had after 8 o'clock.

Clyde A. Duniway, the salutatorian, spoke upon the duties of "Citizenship." The essay was most creditable and evinced a knowledge of the subject which goes far to show that the youth is on the right track to become an intelligent, reasoning man, capable of taking his place among men of high civic positions.

An instrumental duet by the Misses Ada Bates and Blanche Hersey was well rendered and received with loud applause.

Miss Anna L. Knox, the valedictorian, read an essay upon "Excellence," her subject itself telling the manner in which it was treated. In closing she bid farewell to her classmates and teachers in words of regret and in behalf of the former thanking those who have rendered their education possible.

Miss Blanch Hersey rendered a charming solo, "Alice," by Ascher, in a manner which won for her an enthusiastic encore.

The annual address was delivered by Rev. E. J. Thompson of Salem, after which the diplomas were presented by William Wadhams, chairman of the board of directors.

After singing the class song, written by Henry S. McGowan, the audience dispersed, except some of the more intimate friends of the graduates, who lingered a short time offering their congratulations.

John W Murray Hanged by the Law Yesterday

He Maintains Good Spirits to the Last and Smiles on the Scaffold. His Neck Broken by the Fall—The Funeral.

At twenty-one minutes past 1 yesterday afternoon John W. Murray met death at the hands of the law for the crime of murder. He passed a restless night. Dropping off into a doze about 8, he awoke at 11 and complained of hunger. A meal was prepared, and he ate it with apparent pleasure. His sleep after midnight was broken. He appeared somewhat upset and kept up a rambling conversation with Jailer Dougherty. He seemed to have an idea that because his victim, Alfred Jenke, was a German, that the Germans had hounded him to death, and that American liberty and patriotism was a thing of the past. He was exceedingly nervous and was unable to sit still, yet he looked cheerful and had a pleasant smile for everyone. From the time he ate his breakfast until he was led to the execution he was not without visitors and the opportunity to converse with them gave him relief from the awful solitude of his own thoughts.

Sheriff Jordan's arrangements for the duty before him were perfect and the proceedings were conducted with all the solemnity that should attend the death of a man at the law's hands. Promptly at 12 o'clock, detachments from various militia companies under command of Captain H. Cooke took station around the court house. As usual, a large number of idlers collected, and the crowd grew larger and larger until the drop fell. Probably one thousand people stood on the sidewalks and in the streets surrounding the court house though not one of them could see a movement of what was going on within. The thirty people who were permitted to see the execution gathered in the corridors and the jailer's office, and conversed silently among themselves. A few went in to see Murray, though none of them staid any length of time. Promptly at 1 o'clock, at the invitation of the sheriff, they filed out into the enclosure surrounding the scaffold. The jury, the physicians and reporters ascended the scaffold and took seats, while the remainder stood in front of the scaffold. A very slight drizzle was falling and continued until after the execution.

A very few minutes after the witnesses took stations the condemned man, with the officers and spiritual advisers, marched slowly from the jail to the enclosure in the following order: Nathan Pearcy and Charles Haffenden, Sheriff Jordan and Deputy Sheriff Witherell, the prisoner, supported by D. C. Lounsberry and Jailer Dougherty. As the little procession filed in Mr. Pearcy read in a clear tone the opening words of the Episcopal burial service. Murray had sent for Mr. Lounsberry in the morning, and specially requested that he act as supporter during the ordeal. The murderer was dressed in a neat, clean suit of black which had evidently been his "best suit" in days gone by, and new shoes. Like every other man who was about to be hanged, Murray, immediately on entering the enclosure, glanced up at the noose, half halting when he had made his way in. He walked up the steps to the scaffold with only nominal assistance, and under the direction of the officers, stood in an easy position upon the trap. He had not been manacled. Sheriff Jordan read the death warrant, and asked the prisoner whether he had anything to say why the sentence of the court should not be executed. Murray appeared listless, smiled in a feeble way, and said:

"Well, I don't know as I can say a great deal, I can't help it, I suppose; that is all there is about it." Here he stopped, but was again asked if he had nothing further to say, when he remarked: "Well, I don't see what I can say, I have got to go, I suppose; I must die."

Mr. Pearcy then said that the prisoner had frequently joined with him in religious devotions, that he believed Murray thoroughly understood and appreciated that the blood of Christ would cleanse him from sin, and he expressed the hope that the soul of the doomed man in his last moments would be saved through the mediation of the Savior. Mr. Pearcy then read in full the burial service of the Episcopal church.

During this time, Murray peered through the knot of men in his presence, recognizing a face here and there, and smiling pleasantly. He appeared somewhat dazed all the while, like a man just awakening from some horrible nightmare. Mr. Haffenden offered a suitable prayer, to which Murray gave respectful attention. He shook hands with five or six men on the scaffold and bade them good-bye. Jailer Dougherty then placed the prisoner's wrists into handcuffs which were attached to a strap. This was buckled around the waist, the hands being behind the back. A strap was then fastened around his ankles. Murray watched the operation with a studied smile, very much like a man would give a child who was attempting to bind his feet with ropes. Deputy Sheriff Witherell adjusted the noose very carefully and drew the black cap over Murray's face. A few seconds later, pressure on the button which opened the electric circuit, sprung the trap. Murray was suspended in mid air, and but paid the penalty of the law for his crime. His neck was broken in the fall. There was not a quiver of the body nor the perceptible movement of a muscle, except partial closing of the hands. In five minutes the pulsation was so weak that it could scarcely be felt, and in six minutes had ceased. The body hung fourteen minutes, when being pronounced dead by the legally appointed physicians, it was cut down at 1 35. It was placed in a coffin and conveyed to the coroner's office.

Murray served three years on the Union side during the rebellion, but for some private reason never joined the Grand Army of the Republic. Several members of the order, however, made up a purse, and promised Murray that they would see that he had a decent burial. The funeral will take place this afternoon.

No fewer than 1,000 people called at the coroner's office yesterday afternoon and last night to look at the remains of Murray, and strange as it may seem, among the number were sixty or seventy respectable looking women. There was a steady stream of the morbidly curious from 4 o'clock until past 9.

Immediately after the execution a force of men were set to work and all traces of the gallows and the event of the day removed.

The crime for which Murray suffered the death penalty was the assassination of his wife's brother, Alfred Jenke, about 1 o'clock Sunday morning January 6, 1884, near the corner of Second and Hooker streets, in South Portland. He lay in wait behind a fence with a double-barreled shotgun and fired at Jenke as he approached. Jenke was escorting his sister, Murray's wife, home from a ball, and Murray supposed he was living at another man for whom he had an insane jealousy, on account of attentions to his wife.

There was no train through last week, owing to a land slide of 300 yards near Yale. There may be no train this week.

The Pioneer lumber company (limited) have begun the erection of a large wharf at their mill, and are adding much new machinery.

Captain Cushing's gang from Port Townsend are here to stevedore the vessels loaded with iron for the railroad. The first vessel is expected daily, and they will continue to arrive until late in the summer.

A telegram was received from Senator McInness to-day that the government has advertised for tenders to build a ten-stall round house and other works at Port Moody, and that an advertisement for tenders to reconstruct the wharf here with iron piles will be issued in a few days.

FREIGHTS—Nothing doing.

WHEAT—The market is without [illegible] and values remain firm at last quotations. The Snake river is now open and boats will start out Monday. There is believed to be upon the river 20,000 tons to come out of that section, and it will be slow to move.

OATS—Offerings are [illegible] few, but [illegible] is slow. Quotations largely nominal and [illegible].

PROVISIONS—Receipts of eastern and [illegible] the market, as handlers are [illegible] offering.

POTATOES—Large arrivals [illegible] at San Francisco have not disturbed values [illegible]. There is only a fair amount of business [illegible] shippers hold [illegible] until next week.

CHICKENS—Quote $4@[illegible], the latter for [illegible].

EGGS—In brisk movement at 18c.

WOOL—The local market presents absolutely nothing of interest and even a nominal quotation seems quite uncalled for. The figures 10@12c represent probable paying prices. New York dates say: "Advices from all sections continue favorable to a firm market, and although the movement here is proportionately smaller than at other eastern centers, the business transacted shows a fair consumptive demand, with values well supported, and there is no disposition to urge supplies where consumers are reluctant to further increase their stocks. During the past month both spring and fall Texas have been taken in liberal quantities, but at low prices. Combing and delaine fleeces have also sold to a considerable extent, and the feeling among holders is decidedly firm. Pulled wools have been in better request, but prices show no quotable change. Foreign wools continue strong at primary sources, which adds materially to supporting values of competing domestic grades."

Messrs. Mauger & Avery, Boston, in their annual review of the market, say: "The year 1887 was probably the least profitable of the series which the wool trade has witnessed since 1870. Purchases have been made on narrow margins, which too frequently had disappeared before shippers could get their wools opened at the seaboard for sale. Consignors have on the average held more tenaciously than usual, and consignees in their desire to please shippers have greatly reduced their profits by the extra expense of carrying wools at a time when the wool trade required to borrow large sums of money. When all the active capital of nearly every concern was invested in advances on wool, the Wall street panic frightened the money lenders so that it was impossible to negotiate mercantile paper or borrow on merchandise security. Through all the depression and uncertainty of May, June and July there was not an important failure in the wool or woolen manufacturing trades, nor was there any more decline in values than could be properly attributed to the falling off in demand occasioned by the stoppage of woolen machinery."

Freights—The market is very weak. The ship St. David was taken by an outside party, [illegible] refused by regular shippers. Negotiations are pending for another wooden vessel at a lower rate.

Wheat—Spot: The market has an easier tone and exporters are bidding lower figures, but do not appear to be getting any considerable amount. SALEM, Feb. 10.—The first heated contest of the session in the senate occurred tonight over the bill amending the Astoria charter. The chamber of commerce and the city council both prepared a charter, Reed acting for the first named body in the senate and Lemenweber for the latter in the house. The particular feature of the chamber of commerce or the Reed bill as it is known here are property qualifications for voters and a clause whose effect would be to oust the present city council and officers. It soon became evident that Lemenweber would kill Reed's bill in the house and that Lemenweber's bill would fail under the hands of Reed in the senate and in this emergency Bowlby and Page of the chamber of commerce, and Hume and Cleveland, mayor and councilman, arrived here. After three days' arbitration these gentlemen fixed up a compromise omitting the property qualification and the provision ousting present officials. This measure passed the house and came up for final action in the senate tonight. Reed objected to it, declaring that Bowlby and Page had no authority to act for the chamber of commerce. A general discussion followed, in which it was made to appear to the senate that the measure as it stands represents the democratic city government of Astoria, and the matter at once became a strict party contest. A motion indefinitely to postpone was voted down, the democrats having two majority owing to the absence of several republicans. The senate adjourned at 10 while the matter was pending, and it will come up for further action the first thing tomorrow.

THE PORTLAND LEVEE BILL.

The Portland levee bill as originally introduced passed the house this morning by an overwhelming vote. It was opposed by Cox, who reviewed in a really masterly speech all the arguments against the measure, which, in their purport, are already familiar to the public. But his appeals were without avail with men already determined to crush Portland. It does seem that the Multnomah delegation showed want of spirit in this important matter, which directly affects their interests. It was a great mistake in the beginning for Story to introduce the bill and thereby give it the appearance of Portland favor, but little modified by his subsequent explanation that he did it by request. The Multnomah delegation voted solidly "no," but it is remarkable that not even an opened his mouth to denounce the measure as an outrage, and a steal. Then the knowledge that the game was lost ought not to have prevented an indignant protest. The most helpless member from the most remote corner of the state would not have submitted so tamely. It is not likely that the measure will get through the senate without the modification fixed by Simon in the senate bill which practically nullifies the intended fraud.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Haines has a measure in the senate providing for hospital and health officers at points where transcontinental railroads enter the state. The proposition is important and timely. Only a few days ago several smallpox patients came over the Short Line and were stopped at Baker City. The state should be protected from contagion which may be expected constantly over the railroads. And it is particularly important that we should be protected next summer from cholera.

Black presented in the house this afternoon a bill providing for a commission of three, to be appointed by the governor, to devise a system of assessment and taxation, and to report to the legislature at its next session. The proposition has met with favorable comment, and I think it will go through. It is suggested that Hon. Henry Failing, Hon. Dr. Davenport and Hon. J. A. Haines would be proper men for the commission.

Cole will introduce tomorrow a resolution urging congress to pass Sumner's postal telegraph bill.

Both houses are now working night and day, and debate in the house has been limited to five minute speeches unless by special consent.

In the senate this afternoon Miller's bill for a railroad commission was indefinitely postponed, the senate acting upon the theory that Hume's bill covers all the ground. Miller made a profound and eloquent argument in favor of the bill.

THE SENATORSHIP.

The senatorial situation tonight is just as it has been during the past five days. There is nothing to indicate a change tomorrow, nor on the other hand is there any assurance of stability in the present division of strength. By general consent the conference of anti-Hirsch men proposed for tonight was postponed till Monday night. The democratic position after Saturday's ballot is not clear [illegible] and there are rumors to suit every possible prospect or hope in the situation. Nobody, not even the democrats themselves, know what their course will be. A. H.

HOUSE.

SALEM, Feb. 10.—The house met at 10. The Portland levee bill came up for final action. Cox opposed the bill reviewing minutely and closely the objections to it.

Cole favored the bill because he thought the country needed a competing railroad, but he doubted the purposes and ability of the people who now asked for the levee. He moved to recommit the bill to a special committee of three under instructions to so amend it that any company should have the levee on the terms proposed, if it should complete by October 1, 1889, half of the proposed line.

Bilyeu favored the bill, urging the arguments already made familiar by the senatorial battle.

Montague followed in the same spirit.

Cole's motion was lost by the following vote:

For recommitment and amendment—Barnes, Bourne, Chandler, Cole, Cox, Cusick, Davenport, Dick, Flinn, Gilbert, Kenworthy, Lemenweber, Manning, Mayo, McIlley, Morrow, Story, Sutton, Therkelsen, Will, Wilcox—21.

Against—Abshier, Ball, Bilyeu, Black, Blakeley, Cameron, Connor, Craven, Cyrus, Downing, Gibson, Geer, Hayes, Henkle, Jolly, Kuykendall, Lewis, Lockett, Lyle, Miller, Montague, Nelson, Perry, Porter, Prosser, Roberts, Rogers, Sanders, Shelton, Taylor, Thompson, Walt, Watts, Woodward, Keady—35.

The vote on shall the bill pass was as follows:

Ayes—Abshier, Ball, Bilyeu, Black, Blakeley, Cameron, Cole, Connor, Craven, Cyrus, Downing, Gibson, Geer, Hayes, Henkle, Jolly, Kuykendall, Lewis, Lockett, Lyle, McIlley, Miller, Montague, Nelson, Perry, Porter, Prosser, Rogers, Sanders, Shelton, Smith, Taylor, Thompson, Walt, Watts, Woodward, Keady—38.

No—Barnes, Bourne, Chandler, Cox, Cusick, Davenport, Dick, Flinn, Gilbert, Kenworthy, Lemenweber, Manning, Mayo, Morrow, Roberts, Story, Sutton, Therkelson, Will, Wilcox—21.

Sanders' bill to prevent the tearing up or abandonment of railways, passed.

ASSOCIATED PRESS MARKETS.

NEW YORK STOCK MARKET.

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—Governments unchanged. Stocks lower. Apparently there has been less effort than usual on the part of those recently prominent in the upward movement to resist the downward course of prices. Opening prices were ¼ to ¾ per cent lower than yesterday's close and in early dealings prices were permitted to decline further from ¼ to ½ per cent. The market quickly developed a vigorous attack upon Western Union, which sold down to 60⅞ against 61¾ last evening. St. Paul was equally depressed, selling at 7[illegible], and Missouri Pacific sold at 80¼, a drop of ¾ per cent. The remainder of the market yielded from ½ to 1 per cent. This was followed by a reaction which carried the prices of active stocks before noon above the figures at which they closed yesterday, except for Western Union and St. Paul, which responded only feebly to the advance. The advance continued during the next hour, when the highest prices for most stocks were reached. New York Central showed a gain of 1 per cent over yesterday's closing prices; Lake Shore and Union Pacific each ½ per cent at 64¼ and 50¼ respectively, and Lackawanna ¾ per cent at [illegible]. From 1 until 3 o'clock prices were weak and the lowest prices of the day were made at or near the close of the board. Not a single stock on the active list shows an advance over yesterday's final quotations, and yet with few exceptions the declines amount to less than 1 per cent, generally from ¼ to ½ per cent, with the exception of Western Union, which is 1½ per cent lower at 7[illegible] after touching 7[illegible].

Mining stocks were generally quiet. Con. Cal. [illegible] Virginia sold [illegible] at [illegible]; Pacific [illegible]; Hale & Norcross [illegible]; Horn Silver [illegible]; La Crosse [illegible]; [illegible] at [illegible] and [illegible] at [illegible].

[illegible] NO. 8.

[illegible]LISION OF A PIONEER.

BY SAM L. SIMPSON.

[illegible] tell to me 'bout Oregon. W[illegible] [illegible] I know about the country? W[illegible] [illegible] I'm [illegible] emigrant of '4[illegible] [illegible] hasah."

This [illegible] manifest [illegible] and the inevita[illegible] [illegible] responsive [illegible] caught it upon [illegible] perennially-renewed existe[illegible] [illegible] of its [illegible] spontaneously in the unexpec[illegible] rejoiced [illegible] acquaintance, were both the [illegible] of its [illegible] of John Thomas Croker, a[illegible] property [illegible] noted on all authentic sch[illegible] found only [illegible] of his assets. The dim antiquity [illegible] the [illegible] of its buttressed [illegible], the legendary shadows that hung [illegible] the [illegible] across its broad facade, [illegible] [illegible] to [illegible] the witticism as one of [illegible] [illegible] institutions of the commonwealth [illegible] mirthful creation, which, as I have in [illegible] [illegible] contributed himself, was regarded a[illegible] [illegible] eruption of popular and unrestra[illegible] [illegible] is necessary to the sparkling [illegible] [illegible] as the ghost of Banquo to the unfort[illegible] [illegible] whom it has the honor to represe[illegible] [illegible] obtruded itself in all conventions in wh[illegible] Croker bore a part with the political sug[illegible] Mexican veteran, and the silence which [illegible] [illegible] followed its advent was strewn w[illegible] [illegible] flowers in anticipation of the [illegible] and somewhat wheezy laugh whereby [illegible] announced the [illegible] character of [illegible].

Then, invariably, [illegible] with the deliberate [illegible] [illegible] of a man who had successfully att[illegible] his own funeral, Mr. Croker took a chew [illegible], and the public were permitted to [illegible] in the festivities.

On these occasions, Mr. Washington Wran[illegible] [illegible] who had forsaken the crow[illegible] for reasons that were too modest to [illegible] [illegible], came to the front with a flou[illegible] "Just listen to the old veteran!" he w[illegible] "Why, he speaks as lightly of hew[illegible] [illegible] the forest and driving back the savage [illegible] order to plant the banner of civilizatio[illegible] wilderness of Oregon as if he had only [illegible] a path to a picnic ground in the back[illegible] [illegible] of his native state."

Following the bar, and before the pand[illegible] emotions of those present could subside, [illegible], the newspaper man, who was not disp[illegible] imitate the retiring disposition of the [illegible] oyster, which is said to haunt the parl[illegible] the church sociable, and has registered a[illegible] oath never to be taken alive, would sho[illegible] the responsibilities of the press, and excl[illegible] "Yes, John Thomas, Wrangle is right. You [illegible] monumental embodiment of the west[illegible] [illegible] of the star of empire and the heroism [illegible] hardy few who lighted the watch-fire[illegible] [illegible] progress on the shores of the N[illegible] [illegible] from Shasta to Rome! Those [illegible] will not go out, but your physical or[illegible] [illegible], grand as it is, must obey the unive[illegible] [illegible]. Arise then, and confer a lasting favo[illegible] race. How often have I begged you, [illegible] in my eyes, to give up the written h[illegible] your matchless experiences in the m[illegible] [illegible] the continent and the conquest of a[illegible] [illegible] in the northwest for the benefit of [illegible]. I long to see you embalmed in [illegible] [illegible] in Russia leather. Here's my [illegible], John Thomas, and I am taking yours [illegible] I am shaking hands with millions ye[illegible] [illegible] and rusting the papers of posthu[illegible] memoirs."

Now, Wrangle and Quillem were not [illegible] at the feet of their fellow towns[illegible] [illegible] knew well enough that they were [illegible] [illegible] the blue empyrean of trackless fancy [illegible] committed these extravagancies of [illegible]. Through all the gorgeous phrases [illegible] upon him with oriental profusion the very [illegible] commonplace personality of John Thomas C[illegible] stood out grotesquely like the rude outline [illegible] wooden Indian god, garlanded with flowe[illegible] blazing with decorations of hammered [illegible]. But the many-headed public had determin[illegible] apotheosize Croker and skepticism became [illegible] [illegible] and impertinent. Imaginatively, at [illegible] gilded cenotaph, in a forest of bronze st[illegible] was decreed him living, so that his a[illegible] might ring the diffuct changes of tombston[illegible] [illegible] while the object thereof was capa[illegible] joining in the chorus and "tipping" the o[illegible] [illegible]—a commendable expedient, since it g[illegible] man a taste of his "funeral baked meats" [illegible] he is on the dusted side of the turf.

It is noticeable that all western commu[illegible] are given to hero-worship—a tincture of [illegible] barism filtered down from the stone age. [illegible] the back track in our local history and yo[illegible] find, now and then, a personage loomi[illegible] mightily in the mists of tradition who[illegible] claims to consideration are simply farcical [illegible] taste for picturesque ruins has become [illegible] fined, in fact, that our reflections have a [illegible] edge of sarcasm when we find, on investi[illegible] that many a great man's credentials to [illegible] may be narrowed down to the statemen[illegible] his wife had presented him with twins, o[illegible] he had been subjected to the dietetic ord[illegible] raw mule on the plains.

Croker was a harmless Hercules, ho[illegible] [illegible] got upon his pedestal with a bovine la[illegible] that was really amiable. He had done n[illegible] that entitled him to sculpturesque repose [illegible] Pantheon. His shield was bare as Sir Mo[illegible] with the single exception of the stirring [illegible] which displayed him as an emigrant of '4[illegible] Was a big blonde, portly man with a full [illegible] a placid brow and a pervading smile, [illegible] given to lapses of epigrammatic silence a[illegible] easy indolence which was supposed to po[illegible] reserve of latent power. Wealth had [illegible] to him almost unsought, fo[illegible] life had been as calm [illegible] listless as a September afternoon. H[illegible] grown up in the quiet of a country vill[illegible] the Ohio, and had never known the bitt[illegible] of unrequited toil or felt the scars of s[illegible] sorrow. To all intents and purposes he [illegible] forty-five, a callow, unfrosted youth, wi[illegible] never strayed within the gilded gates of t[illegible] hidden world, and was a lugubrious, full [illegible] illustration of the pensive couplet,

[illegible] to concrete prose, the his[illegible] [illegible] conquests in Oregon was s[illegible] [illegible]. He came here with money, an[illegible] series of investments, advised and dire[illegible] his wife, became, in the course of a few [illegible] without mental or physical exertion, a [illegible] independent fortune. The stormy waves [illegible] excitement [illegible] many an inert [illegible] [illegible].

As often happens with lumpish, in[illegible] men, Croker had a jewel of a wife, a [illegible] little matron, wise as Med[illegible] [illegible] as Penelope, who represented the br[illegible] nerve and fire of the conjugal team. B[illegible] claiming all credit for herself, she [illegible] [illegible] into the senate atmosp[illegible] [illegible] her favor and demanded that he be w[illegible] ped with an energy and persistence that [illegible] no defeat.

Thus the ever swinging censer of a gif[illegible] devoted wife won volumes for the Cr[illegible] shrine. She got out daily editions of [illegible] was forever quoting the wise and witt[illegible] that he had never said and glorifying dee[illegible] he had never done. On this capital, an[illegible] ing else, he was set up in business as a [illegible] a philosopher, and finally, taking his cu[illegible] the early date of his irruption into the [illegible] ette valley, he began to pose as the origi[illegible]
